TREMONTON, UTAH. Branch Yards at GARLAND

JENSEN BROTHERS

Jensen Brothers carry on an extensive business in each of their lines of trade, which consists of lumber, furniture, hardware, and ranching. The firm is incorporated under the laws of Utah, and capitalized for forty thousand dollars, with thirty-five thousand dollars fully paid up. It is a growing and prosperous concern and ere long the full capitalization will be needed and paid in.

The firm was organized on January 15, 1906, with the following named officers: Hyrum Jensen, president, Peter Jensen, vice-president; Joseph Jensen, secretary, and James Jensen, treasurer.

Each of the varied branches is ably managed by one of the brothers. Their ranch in the fertilest part of the fertile Blue Creek valley consists of nine hundred and sixty acres, eight hundred of which are now under cultivation, and bringing handsome returns in bounteous crops, an average of ten thousand bushels a year; while prospects are good for even larger returns next season. In addition to this, the farm is being stocked with horses and hogs. Peter Jensen manages this part of the institution.

The furniture, hardware, and also undertaking departments. A full and complete line is maintained in each of the above departments, so that the trade is liberally supplied with variety to meet public requirements. Their commodious store on Main street is headquarters for these lines where the best trade of the valley centers.

The lumber yard and cement department where a complete line of building materials is constantly maintained, and courteously dealt out to the trade.

This enterprising firm solicits the continued confidence and patronage of the generous and prosperous farmers of the great Bear River valley, and promises, through practical experience of many years, to serve its patrons with faithful and honorable bargains at all times.

without irrigation and produce even more than rye and bring better prices; so naturally the people turned to the raising of wheat and for many years we were fighting the volunteer rye that came from year to year in our wheat fields. But the real transformation of this valley was brought by the water of Bear river, distributed over the valley by the splendid canal system now owned and operated by the Utah-Idaho Sugar company. By the use of this water on our fertile fields the yield of all kinds of grain is very high, and along with the land and water we have the high and clear altitude, which gives such a clear and almost transparent appearance to our grain compared with grain raised in the eastern states and most parts of Europe. Our sugar beets in the Bear River valley are superior both in quality and quantity. Our fruit can't be excelled. It has also been proved within the last year that tomatoes and peas can be raised in this valley with good results. The Bear River valley is a choice location, surrounded by high ranges of mountains which protect us from the fierce cyclones and cold blizzards which we read about so often transpiring in other states.

of golden surfaced grain, much of which finishes the glaze of the bovines smooth cover; the flockmaster's blating herds; the teamster's steady steeds.

The Bear River valley covers an area of 350 square miles, over one-fourth of the area of the state of Rhode Island, whose population is about 450,000. Bear River valley has only a population of about 6,000. However it is being discovered and there is a gradual increase of steady industrious, economical citizens from other parts of our state and such states as Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Indiana, and Illinois, are furnishing a substantial quota. The reason for their staying is easy to understand: Making more money than they could at home.

Their coming has been no error in judgment. If it were you would find them going back to the states.

But this is not the case. People who predict what the Bear River valley will be in twenty years from now are bold to the point of rashness.

Our dry-land wheat belts along the foot hills above the irrigating system are phenomenal for productivity when cared for according to scientific farming methods, and are only partly utilized. This land produces twenty, thirty and forty bushels of wheat to the acre.

The valley, which only twenty years since was a thriving sheep range, has gotten past the shanty age, and many prosperous towns have sprung up, viz: Corinne, Bear River City, Beaver Dam, Fielding, Plymouth, Thatcher, Garland, Tremonton, Elwood, Iowa Spring and Penrose. There are numerous churches and school houses, mostly all built of brick, which is also true of many of the business houses, where concrete and steel have composed much of their construction.

Scientific farming, including horticulture, scientific stock-raising, domestic science and economics are among the advanced topics taught by up-to-date teachers. The valley is traversed by the S. P. railroad, O. S. L. railroad and the Malad Valley railroad, and at present the Ogden Interurban electric line is making surveys contemplating the extension of their road through the valley.

One of the best assets in the Bear River valley is that gigantic irrigating system owned by the Utah-Idaho Sugar company, and furnishing water to sufficiently irrigate 75,000 acres of as strong and fertile soil as ever the sun shone on.

Numerous and bounteous crops of vegetables such as potatoes, tomatoes, carrots, beans, peas, onions, melons, cucumbers, cabbage and celery are grown profitably. The cereals such as oats, produce from fifty to 120 bushels per acre, barley from fifty to ninety bushels per acre. And in season blackberries, currants, strawberries, plums, peaches, apples, pears are grown plentifully and in great variety. Among the staple crops grown very profitably is the sugar beet, which for quality and quantity per acre has never been surpassed and probably never equaled in the world. About 6,000 acres are grown each season and a ready market at the factory of the Utah-

Idaho Sugar company at Garland for all we can produce, earning to the producer anywhere from forty-five dollars to one hundred and thirty-five dollars per acre, according to the intensive and precise interest the owner follows in fertilizing, planting and otherwise caring for his crop, insuring one two-pound beet to grow on each 200 square inches of his beet field, or thirty-one tons per acre.

Apple orcharding is very remunerative to the careful and prudent farmer who has selected fertile, well drained and deep-soiled ground, always having a full stand of trees to the acre, pruned, sprayed and irrigated and cultivated in an intensive and husband-like manner. One hundred trees per acre, seven years old should produce five bushels of apples per tree and ordinarily should sell for one dollar per bushel, leaving a handsome profit. Apples and peaches this season have been sold in 103 important cities of America and most flattering comments have been made of the quality and appearance of our fruit.

Our valley is short of progressive dairying methods. The soil, deep and fertile, is well adapted to the growth of all forage plants. Three crops of alfalfa are cut each season, producing from three to six tons per

An Interurban Electric Railroad From Ogden To and Through the Bear River Valley is Coming

In the following statement from John P. Holmgren, president of the Bear River Commercial club we have reference made to it and from all reports at hand this new road will traverse through a territory not yet opened. This will afford numerous good openings for those who come in early and select cautiously. Sites can be procured in this valley from real estate dealers in this valley and at Salt Lake, Ogden and Brigham City and our suggestion to homeseekers is "Come, look around, choose your site and close the deal without delay."

THE BEAR RIVER VALLEY

A high school student once described the Bear River valley "as that tract of land just opposite Brigham City."

"They little know of England, who only England know," says Kipling.

In order that the people may know more about this fertile laden valley I want to set down a few facts. Mark Twain says: "Truth is such a precious article; let's all economize in its use."

Anyway the Bear River valley occupies a great portion of that part of Utah that lies north of the Great inland sea and it is bounded by the snow capped Wasatch range on the east, the state of Idaho on the north and rolling bunch grass on the west. It supports numerous thrifty husbandmen with families, ever content with producing thousands of bushels
